PHELPS SELECTED TO SERVE ON STATE ASSOCIATION BOARD

Glendale, Ariz. – On Friday, Feb. 1, Glendale City Manager Kevin Phelps was selected to serve on the board of directors for the Arizona City/County Management Association (ACMA), the statewide association for professional city and county managers.

Established in 1954, the ACMA is the professional organization dedicated to increasing the knowledge and ability of city, town and county managers, as well as other local government administrators and to strengthen the quality of local government in the State of Arizona through professional management, education, training and the mutual exchange of information. The organization has nearly 400 members ranging from students studying public administration to long-tenured city and county managers.

“I’m honored to be selected by my fellow city managers to serve on the board of this important organization,” said Phelps. “As local government leaders, it’s imperative that city managers continually strengthen their skills and learn innovative new ideas from other municipalities. I look forward to the opportunity to serve with my fellow board members and to provide leadership to this vital association.”

Phelps will serve on the board with other municipal leaders from across the state including representatives from Apache Junction, Avondale, Bisbee, Chandler, Flagstaff, Mesa, Phoenix, Peoria and Wickenburg. He will serve a two-year term from February 2019 to February 2021.
