

The Pain Center of Arizona is Relocating Its Administrative Headquarters to Glendale

March 2014: Eleven years ago, The Pain Center of Arizona began with just one pain management clinic and a handful of employees. Today, TPC has grown to over 15 locations statewide with 250+ employees and is the largest pain management practice in the Southwest. We are excited and proud to call Glendale home to our new Administrative Center as this custom, state of the art 12,000 square foot facility will allow The Pain Center of Arizona to continue its phenomenal growth as we move towards the future.

“We are excited to have chosen this Glendale location for our administrative expansion and are confident that this will allow us to further support patient care across the state,” founder Steven Siwek, M.D. says.

The city of Glendale is also excited about the relocation. “We are pleased The Pain Center of Arizona chose Glendale as the preferred location to expand its company and create a permanent home for its headquarters,” says Brian Friedman, Glendale Economic Development Director. “Having the home office of a company such as The Pain Center of Arizona here in our city provides both economic and employment opportunities and further solidifies Glendale as a top choice for quality healthcare businesses.”

In January 2013, Glendale Mayor Jerry Weiers took office and continues to place heavy importance on the well being of the community. “Healthcare is one of our core industries in Glendale and The Pain Center of Arizona’s new administrative headquarters is a great fit. The city is pleased to welcome this new addition to our business community.”

Located at 5281 N. 99th Ave, Glendale, the TPC Administrative Center will be the hub for all of The Pain Center of Arizona’s administrative activities across the Valley. There will be an open house at the new facility on April 11, scheduled from 10am-12pm.
